

Contributors

Moon Chung-in

Dean of Graduate School of International Studies in Yonsei University, Moon Chung-in taught at the University of Kentucky, Duke University, and the University of California at San Diego. He was accompanied President Kim Dae-jung to Pyongyang as a special delegate for the inter-Korean Summit in June, 2000. His most recent books include Economic Crisis and Structural Reforms in South Korea: Assessments and Implications, Kim Dae-jung Government and Sunshine Policy: Promises and Challenges.

Lim Suk-jun

A Full-time Lecturer at Dong-A University, he received his Ph.D. in Political Science at the University of Chicago. His publications include "The Political Economy of Orderly Marketing Agreements (1977-81)," "Can Declining Industries be Saved? Lessons from Taiwan's Subcontracting Network Production System," and "Industrial Orders in Korea and Taiwan: East Asian Development Model and the Theory of Convergence."

Lee Jung-min

A Professor of Graduate School of International Studies, Yonsei University, he is a former Policy Analyst at the RAND, and Visiting Research Fellow at the National Institute for Defense Studies. He holds a B.A. from Yonsei University, and an M.A.L.D. and a Ph.D. in international relations from Tufts University. He is the author of Coping with the North Korean Missile Threat: Implications for Northeast Asia and Korea, Preparing for Korean Unification: Scenarios and Implications and Korean Unifications: Scenarios and Implications.

Park Jae-young

A Professor at the Gyeongsang National University and an editing director at the Korea Academic Council on the United Nations Systems (KACUNS). He holds a B.A. from Hankuk University of Foreign Studies, and received his M.A. and Ph.D. from Northern Illinois University. His major publications include Theory of International Organization Politics, "Relations Between Nation States and IOs: Based on the Process of Decision Making."

Kwak Jai-seok

A researcher at the Academy of Korean Studies. He holds a B.A. from Inha University and an M.A. in Political Science from the Graduate School of Korean Studies, Academy of Korean Studies, and a Ph.D. in Political Science from University of Illinois. His major articles include "Confucian Communitarianism and Women in Singapore," "Confucian Communitarianism and Women in Singapore."

Kim Byung-ki, Soh Chang-rok

A Professor at Korea University, Kim Byung-ki received his Ph.D. in Political Science from the Institute of USA-Canada Studies of the Russian Academy of Sciences. His major articles include "Change in the Strategic Relations between the Russian Federation and North Korea: Origin, Process, and Moscow's New Approach," "South Korea's Defense Cooperation with the People's Republic of China, and the Russian Federation: Policy Choices."

Soh Chang-rok is also a Professor at Korea University. He holds a Ph. D. in Political Science from the Fletcher School of Law and Diplomacy at Tufts University. He is the author of Comparative Study of Korean and Japanese Trade Negotiations with the United States: The Case of Automobile Industry, and wrote "Technological Dependence and Limits to Growth of the Korean Economy."