

Contributors

Park Sun-Song

Professor in the Department of North Korean Studies at Dongguk University, he was formerly an associate research fellow at Korean Institute for Defense Analyses. His major interests are North Korean Economy and Inter-Korean Economic Relations. Recently, he authored North Korean Economy and Unification of Korean Peninsula (2003) and Adam Smith and Liberalism (2003), and co-authored Korean Peace Report (2002).

Park Ihn-hwi

Assistant Professor of International Relations, GSIS, at Ewha Women's University. His areas of expertise are security studies, U.S. foreign policy, Northeast Asian security, and Cold War history. He was research professor of Asiatic Research Center at Korea University, and has been a non-resident research fellow for Korea-US Exchange Council. He serves on the editorial board of Korean Journal of International Relations. He received his Ph.D. from Northwestern University in 1999.

Nam Young-Sook

A research fellow at the Korea Institute for International Economic Policy, she holds a Ph.D. in international development from Stanford University. Formerly, an economist at the Organisation for Economic Cooperation and Development (OECD) in Paris. Author of Reforming China's Enterprises: Progress and the Challenges Ahead. Her major articles include "Reforming the Public Expenditure System in Korea," and "Challenges to China's Banking Industry."

Bradley O. Babson and Yoon Deok Ryong

Bradley Babson is a consultant on Asian affairs with a concentration on economic engagement with North Korea and Northeast Asia economic cooperation. He worked for the World Bank for 26 years until retiring in 2000, serving nearly his entire career in the East Asia and Pacific Region. He received his B.A. from Williams College in 1972, and an MPA from the Woodrow Wilson School of International and Public Affairs at Princeton University in 1974.

Yoon Deok Ryong is director of Department of International Macroeconomics and Finance, Korea Institute for International Economic Policy. He received his B.A., M.A. and Ph.D. in Economics from Kiel University, Germany. His major research fields are International Economics, Regional Integration, and North Korean Economy, and recent articles are "Economic Implications of Improved DPRK-EU Relations;" and "Searching for a Better Regional Surveillance Mechanism in East Asia."

Cha Du-Hyeogn

A research fellow at Korean Institute for Defense Analyses, Cha has a B.A. and M.A. from Yonsei University and is a Ph.D. candidate in Political Science at the same university. His major field is ROK-US Security Cooperation and Party-Military Relations in North Korea. He co-authored Alliance for the Next Century: Future ROK-US Security Cooperation (1995), and wrote "The ROK's Force Improvement: Toward 'Cooperative Self-Reliant Defense.'"

Bang Ho-kyung

A researcher at KIEP, he received an M.A. in Economic Policy from Choong-Ang University. Currently, he is actively participating in "China-Japan-Korea Cooperative Research" promoted by the Korea Council of Economic Social Research Institutes. His major articles include "An Analysis on Specialization Structure among Korea, China, and Japan Based on Intra-Industry Trade Index," and "Rule of Origin Agreement Strategy in Korea-Japan, Korea-Singapore FTA."